The Mercury.

JOSEPH P. BARNHART, Editor and Proprietor.
SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1885.

Cholera has again broken out at Marseilles and Toulon in France. The places where its ravages were so great one year ago.

It is reported that Secretary Bayard proposes to buy a part of Mexico, the six Mexican states which lie next to the United States boundary.

At the meeting of the Vermont Editors' Association at Ocean View Hotel, Block Island, Thursday, night resolutions of sympathy were telegraphed to President Grant.

It is said that the clerks at Washington do not dare apply for a vacation for fear that they will find their places filled by others when they return. These are uncertain times for office seekers and office holders.

Mahone will probably be the readjuster candidate for governor of Virginia this fall, which will insure a lively contest. Mahone will prove a hard man for the Bourbons to beat.

All the main telegraph and telephone wires in Washington are now underground, and the rest are being placed so rapidly. The thing can be done when it must be, and it will be done in all cities sooner or later.

The President has driven another nail in his political coffin. He has announced that he can see no one but Cabinet officers on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. This is taking out three good days from the office seekers' calendar which will never do.

Bradburgh was turned out of the House of Commons Monday and not allowed to take the oath. Gladstone said the House had acted unconstitutionally and illegally, but the Tories were inexorable.

Secretary Bayard says if Austria will not receive the now somewhat notorious Kelley, the mission will be allowed to remain vacant. Now that is wrong. They are after good democrats besides Kelley; we can suggest several who will willingly try to fill the bill.

Lord Salisbury has offered to resume the Afghan frontier negotiations at the point where they were closed by Earl Grenville, providing the convention include a Russian engagement to hold the frontier as a permanent limit.

The Boston Journal says, Higgins was summoned to the White House by the President Monday. He was dejected afterward. It is inferred that the President either demanded his resignation, or directed him to cease to denounce civil service reform.

The axe of reform, retrenchment or political maneuvering has reached the Providence Custom House, where it has lopped off the heads of several officers, among whom are Maj. Charles H. Hanly of Warren and Charles Burroughs.

His Excellency Governor Wetmore has accepted an invitation for himself and personal staff to be present at the reunion of the Second Rhode Island Volunteers to be held at Oakland Beach, on Tuesday, July 21st, which is the twenty-fourth anniversary of the battle of Bull Run.

The weather has been very hot the past week in all parts of the country. Thursday the thermometer reached 102 in some parts of New Hampshire. It was over one hundred in New York and there were many cases of sun stroke. It has been a great week for sea side watering places though.

One of the most enormous family monuments in the country is to be set up in the Pittsfield Cemetery next month. It is to be provided by the Allen family, and is from the Allen quarries in Missouri. The monument consists of a shaft of polished granite 40 feet high, with two bases, and weighs about 40 tons.

The agents and officers of the Old Colony Railroad and Steamboat Company have been kept busy this past week attending to the wants of the many people with whom they have had to deal. They have attended to their duties faithfully, and no person has any cause to complain of the treatment he has received at the hands of these officials.

The American Institute of Instruction has brought together in Newport this week some two thousand teachers and those interested in education. The gathering was a noticeable one for it is seldom that so many educated people are gathered together in convention. We hope that this is only the beginning of many meetings of a similar kind that shall be held in Newport in the future. There is no better nor more attractive spot in the country for such gatherings, than Newport.

We have given considerable space in this issue of the Mercury to the papers read before the American Institute of Instruction, because the papers are worthy of being preserved. The address of Mr. Tilton, Head Master of our Rogers High School, was one of the best papers of the session. It should be carefully read and considered by every one, we give it in full on the second page. The opening exercises Monday evening which were conducted principally by Newport people we give in full on page 7. The address of Hon. Amos Hadley on Horace Mann is an exceedingly readable article. We have given it substantially as read by the author.

A despatch from Yokohama says there is no hope whatever of saving the Pacific Mail steamer City of Tokio, which is ashore near their e.

Mrs. Prof. Gammell gave a large reception yesterday afternoon.

A Young Girl's Terrible Fate.

White Miss Bertha Hincks, daughter of General E. W. Hincks, was walking with a friend on Brattle street, Cambridge, Mass. Saturday afternoon, her friend noticed that the back portion of her dress, which was of light material, had taken fire, and called her attention to the fact. As soon as Miss Hincks saw the flames she rushed across the street and endeavored to enter a house on the opposite side. Finding the door locked, however, she ran for the next house, climbing over a dividing fence in her frantic haste; but, when over, her strength failed her and she was unable to go further. The whole affair, which did not last over a minute, was witnessed by two gentlemen living near by, who immediately rushed to Miss Hincks' assistance, and by wrapping her in their coats and rolling her in grass, managed finally to extinguish the flames, but not until she was so horribly burned that she died from the effects Sunday forenoon. The dress is supposed to have caught fire from a smoldering fire cracker lying on the sidewalk. Miss Hincks was about 20 years old and had just completed her first five years' studies at the Harvard annex.

The Fourth at Woodstock.

The fourth of July was celebrated in the usual manner at Woodstock, Ct., under the auspices of Mr. Bowen, of the New York Independent. The weather was perfect, the attendance was large, and the supply of eloquence ample. The exercises were held under the shadow of a hill on which John Eliot is said to have preached to the Indians. The editorial host and speakers were sheltered under a light canvas canopy, about which clustered the audience in Sunday clothes. Congressman John T. Wait, of Norwich, opened the day with an address of welcome, concluding by the nomination, as president of the day, of Gov. H. B. Harrison, and a number of vice-presidents and secretaries. Gen. Logan followed in a speech of "Advice to Rising Youth." President James McCosh, D. D., of Princeton College, spoke on "What an American University Should Be." And Joaquin Miller read his poem, "Greece's Ride with Hunk Monk."

Senator Sherman on Politics.

Senator Sherman says that the prospect for republican success in Ohio this year is exceptionally good. The democrats, he thinks, will try to force headily into the race, although he does not want to go. Regarding national politics, he said that he did not think the defection in the republican party last year would continue permanently. Many persons who had not voted for Mr. Blaine and many who had voted for Mr. Cleveland, he added, had expressed their desire, in N. Y. State at least, to find a candidate for governor among those mentioned for nomination by the republicans. As to the future, Mr. Sherman said that he believed issues would be raised up for the republicans, and that their defeat would be short-lived. As for himself, he had no desire for higher political honors.

Major Pierce Not to be Contested.

Under the heading of "The Page-Piece Election Contest," the Providence Journal of July 2d has the following: "The contest of Charles H. Page, Esq., for the seat in the House of Representatives held by Major William A. Pierce as member of the Second Congressional District, has been revived within a week by the contestant, in the appointment of Claude J. Farnsworth, Esq., notary public, to take deposition in the case and in the service of a notice upon Major Pierce to appear, in person or by counsel, at the hearing on the first of which was held on June 29th at the office of Mr. Farnsworth, and the second at Warwick on June 30th. Major Pierce declined to appear at the hearings, protesting that the limit of time in which to take testimony in a contested election case, ninety days, had expired, and hence he was not bound to comply with the notice. The Secretary of State has also been summoned, and refused to submit the official record of the votes in the election on the same ground. It is understood that the list of persons whose names have been secured to testify, numbers between eight and nine hundred, principally residents in Kent County. The time for the next hearing has not been fixed."

The Fall River republicans say the appointment of Mr. Tootle as deputy collector of internal revenue, is a good one. His connection with the liquor business, was urged against him in some quarters, is only as a proprietor of a restaurant near the Old Colony depot on the wharf, and of late years the sale of liquors there has been discontinued.

It is estimated that there are in London 150,000 children who never go to school, and who have not been called to account by the authorities whose duty it is to look after these cases. What a suggestion this gives of the bigness of London! Our total population within the school-going ages is not two-thirds of that number.

Secretary Whitney, in revoking the order of ex-Secretary Chandler in relation to officers of cruising vessels having their families with them, says he does not assume to question the existence of some evil which the order was intended to remedy, but that it was found impossible to enforce it.

The three leading office-holders in Boston—Collector Worthington, Marshal Banks and Postmaster Tolney—did not attend the Logan dinner. They are not going to be classed as offensive partisans, by dining with one of the most prominent men of the Republican party—not they.

The alleged great revolution in England does not amount to much. Salisbury is going to carry out Gladstone's policy in India and the Sudan, and abandon coercion in Ireland. He is, after all, only a continuance of Gladstone. About all there is of it is a change of ministers and of patronage.

Horace Mann.

One night in the latter part of June, 1837, a man was alone in his room in Boston, writing in his Journal. That room was his office and bed chamber; there he had labored long and severely, and "had brought some things to pass." His was the head generously gifted and cultured; his, the heart, strong and brave, yet tender and sensitive; his, the health, robustly sustaining the hardest decrees of an exhausting and iron will. He had the eloquent tongue; he wielded the ready and powerful pen; truth, spoken or written by him never lacked the effectiveness of appropriate expression, for his fine organization gave his sturdy logic full permit to be equipped with what might be termed in the words of the great orator of rhetoric, "Gifted thus with the power of conviction and persuasion in the cause of truth and warmed with a whole soul's enthusiasm, he was a radiant man." As one of his friends has aptly called him, the magnetic centre of an ever enlarging circle of personal influence. Forty-one years of rain and shine had matured his manhood, and his hair was now, not chiefly, was white. The high arching head and massive brow, in the mild bright eyes, indeed in the whole countenance, fine and firm of lineament and on which the light of the genial relieved the shade of the sedate. But what wrote that man there in the still watches of that June night? I will read the words that flowed from his ready pen:—"I cannot say that this day is one which I have not looked forward with deep anxiety. The chance of being offered a station which would change the whole course of my action, and consequently of my duties through life, was not to be regarded with indifference. The deep feeling of interest was brightened by the reflection, that, in case of my receiving the appointment of Secretary of the Board of Education, my sphere of possible usefulness would be indefinitely enlarged, and that my failure would forever force with contrast the noble duty and the inadequate discharge of it. The day is past, I have received the offer. The path of usefulness is opened before me. My present purpose is to enter into it. Few undertakings are more arduous, few of more importance, few more fruitful in beneficial results. God grant me an ambition of selflessness, a mind of wisdom, a heart of benevolence. A new fountain may now be opened, let me strive to direct its current in such a manner that, if when I have departed from life, I may be still permitted to witness its course; I may be still engaged and deepening in an everlasting progression of virtue and happiness." So wrote Horace Mann. So continued he, searching himself; so reverently appreciative of duty, and with piercing gaze into the future even beyond the shore of time accepted by the trust of an untold and difficult position. The spirit with which he entered upon his new work was, of itself, prophetic of success.

What manner of spirit it was, he forcibly depicted years afterward in a declaration: "When I left a lucrative profession for the secretarialship, I cheerfully surrendered all hopes of wealth and promotion; and, from the day I accepted the office, I held myself personally responsible for the success of the enterprise, and though it might cost me my means, my health, my life, or a hundred-fold the cause to be maintained, I held them as trifles compared to them all." "Providence helps those who help themselves," Dr. Franklin says, in wise direction, verified in the career of the world's greatest and best, and in the life of any one no more strikingly than in Mann's life. Born in 1796, in a farmer's humble cottage, he was directed but a short time by that parent who gave him a man of moral worth and love of learning. Dying early he left to his children not wealth, but a treasure priceless beyond gold, in a noble, pious, devoted mother. Puritan traditions of integrity and honor were cherished. Puritan virtues nourished beneath that modest roof-tree. Love of knowledge was there intensified in the young hearts by parental lips, and learning and learned men were always spoken of with enthusiasm and a kind of reverence. Play hours were earned by extra exertion to finish the daily tasks, so that work became to Horace the one essential element, became what water is to the fish, the condition of life, setting about whatever he had to do like a fatalist. He loved books, enjoyed few opportunities for reading them, and braided straw even in a twelve-month, till his fifteenth year, comprised his school experience even under the wretched tuition of the time which so far from damping his ardor, raised in him the "single of reform." The charming merry child early showed that fund of wit and humor which in after life irradiated his talk and writings to a marked and delightful degree. Free from common vices, his boyish pleasures were built on the wish to free others from them and ignorance, to do something for humanity. Starting out in preparation for college about his twentieth year, when the glorious possibility of studying Latin broke in upon him, in six months he was a sophomore at Brown University, where his intense work gave him the lead and first place in the Commencement of 1819, his oration being on "Progressive Character of Human Nature." His health resulted from such close application and led to a careful consideration of physiological laws, which he ever afterward enforced, with the exception of overwork, upon himself and advocated to the young.

He tutored in college, and left to enter practice of law at Dedham, afterward at Boston, where he worked industriously for fourteen years, habitually sixteen hours a day, on honest clients and just causes, for he dealt with no other. Then it was that he served in the State Legislature, specially becoming President of the Senate and the originator of many measures of philanthropy and moral reform, for he was an earnest advocate of religious freedom and educational improvement.

The Worcester Hospital for Insane patients, in part to his influence and philanthropic endeavor as an enlightened and beneficent legislator. Delicate Charlotte Messer, daughter of his college president and his wife, now died and plunged him into deepest sorrow, and formed that "melancholy tissue of his life." The smile returned years later in a happy home of a second marriage. His earnings for a business connection, and he sets manfully to work in a dim attic with his law books to raise the debt. He succeeded, but lay at length on a bed of sickness. From that fiery furnace of trial he had just emerged when he became Secretary of the State Board of Education, with the thoughts and purposes stated at the beginning of the discourse on "Law books," he says, "for now, the bar is no longer my forum. I have abandoned jurisprudence and betook myself to the larger sphere of mind and morals. The next generation is my client. I now devote myself to the supreme welfare of mankind." School instruction was poor, the teachers having no professional training, and being meanly paid, and possessing a social rank but non-descript.

School committees were ignorant and remote, unwholesome blotches of school houses defaced the landscape; school books were as badly adapted and selected as they were badly used in the hands of incompetency. Horace Mann became the preacher of education and the apostle of the common school. In town and country throughout the state he calls the people to meeting and conventions, devotes a portion of his slender salary to the diffusion of pamphlets on education; but nearly everywhere meets with discouragement, apathy, prejudice and opposition, though a "dent from his hammering," as he himself has said, has been chronicled here and there. His teaching as lecturer and instructor is at length diffusing a better spirit, in the masses of teachers, in pupils, better modes; higher aims in the corps of instructors in the public schools. Mann labored not less than fifteen hours a day over the varied departments of his work, never taking a day of pleasure, and in months with a friend, he was seeking for official propriety hindered his progress in teacher, in pupil, better modes; higher aims in the corps of instructors in the public schools. A MARVEL OF PURITY.

Royal a Perfect Baking Powder—Absolutely Free from Lime.

The Royal Baking Powder is considered by all chemists and food analysts to be a marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. Furthermore, it is now the only baking powder before the public free from lime and absolutely pure.

This is due largely to the improved method by the use of which it has been made possible to produce a perfectly pure cream of tartar, from which all the lime has been eliminated.

This chemically pure cream of tartar is exclusively employed in the manufacture of the Royal Baking Powder, so that its absolute freedom from lime and all other extraneous substances is guaranteed.

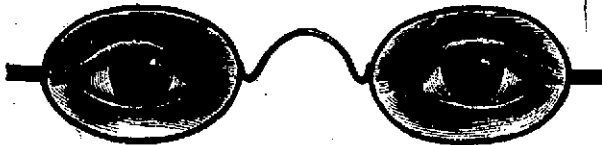

Professor McMurtrie, late chemist in chief to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, after analyzing many samples of cream of tartar of the market, testified to the absolute purity of that used in the Royal Baking Powder as follows:

"I have examined the cream of tartar manufactured by the New York Tartar Company and used by the Royal Baking Powder Company in the manufacture of their baking powder, and find it to be perfectly pure, and free from lime in any form.

"All chemical tests to which I have submitted it have proved the Royal Baking Powder perfectly healthful, of uniform, excellent quality, and free from any deleterious substance.

BLOCK ISLAND.

In an article in the New York Medical Record, after referring to winter resorts, the West Indies, Florida, the Adirondacks, Colorado, etc., Dr. H. H. Curtis goes on to speak of Block Island as follows:

Physicians take great care in the selection of a winter resort for their patients, but where to spend the summer is not considered to be an important question. Many of our men and women rely on the two or three weeks' relaxation they get in summer for systematic improvement, on the strength of which the physiological machinery must run for another year. To this very class of people, together with those spoken of above, from whom the great army of consumptives is recruited, I would suggest another place quite as near New York, and possessing even greater advantages at certain seasons for the overworked brains of our professional and business men, as well as their wives and children. The place is BLOCK ISLAND, situated midway between Montauk Point and Point Judith. The island rises precipitously from the ocean, the cliffs toward the eastward standing perpendicularly two hundred feet above the surf, which constantly washes their base. From this huge wall the land slopes toward the west until it is nearly level with the sea, the surface of the island being made up of a succession of knolls, between which here and there, are the "duck ponds," natural springs, full of water-lilies.

The island, being thirty miles from the coast-line of Rhode Island, receives on three sides the breezes from the Atlantic Ocean, and, on account of the cold current which sets in toward the entrance of the Sound, the temperature is markedly affected. The evenings are invariably cool, and one really gets the impression, walking on the broad piazza of the great hotel, that he is on the deck of an ocean steamer, breathing the purest air, untainted by the dust, pollen and organic elements which always appear as constituents of the atmosphere on the main land. I think it must be this absolute purity of the atmosphere which has given the island a reputation of possessing a specific effect on certain diseases of the eye. During a two months' stay at the place last summer, I had an opportunity of studying the effect of the air on several cases of malarial fever, which had been sent there, and also of observing the very great advantage several phthisical patients derived in being relieved of night sweats. We read long articles setting forth the advantages to be derived from the climate of Ventnor, Isle of Wight, for those invalids requiring change and perfect rest.

VISITING VERMONT EDITORS.—The Vermont Editors and Publishers Association, with ladies and invited guests, a party of 170, including Lieut. Gov. Ormsbee, ex-Gov. Proctor, Judge W. G. Veasy, and a large number of officers and prominent gentlemen of the State, arrived at 12:30 Thursday and took rooms and dinner at the Ocean View. Rambles and drives occupied the afternoon, and at 8 o'clock they assembled at the finest banquet ever served on the island. Justice Samuel Miller and ladies, Gov. W. H. Harrison, of Connecticut, and ex-Sergeant-at-Arms Col. Geo. W. Hooker being among their guests at the table. Soon after 10 o'clock they adjourned to the Music Hall for toasts and the transaction of business.

The minister was discussing the question of baptism with the infant class. He was not sure how many of the children understood the full significance of the rite.

"How many of you have been baptized?" he asked.

Several of the children put up their hands.

"Is there anyone else who has been baptized?" asked the minister. A little girl shyly raised her hand:

"I haven't been baptized," said she, "but I've been vaccinated."

It is expected that there will be a deficit of nearly five millions in the postal revenues for the last fiscal year.
